Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. In claims 1 and 7, it is unclear what applicant intends by the top and bottom spline radius because the top and bottom of the spline there is a radial surface wherein that surface would have both an inner and outer radius equal to the peaks and troughs of the splines. Therefore, it is unclear if the top and bottom radius is intended to refer to the surface, the inner radius or, the outer radius. The claims were examined as best understood.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 3-7 and 9-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hollinger (US 3,316,952). Hollinger discloses a locknut and method comprising a body (11) having a threaded bore (14) with its length about equal to its diameter and an aperture (16) formed at the top end of the body including a plurality of forged splines elements (19') extending from a top surface of the body to an actuating wall (15) which is provided at an angle relative thereto. The splines having an engagement edge with adjacent splines separated by a void. A deformable locking member (17) having an inner surface larger than the threaded bore and an outer surface engaged by the splines (column 3, lines 46-51) which inherently would include the engagement edge. The volume of the deformable locking member being greater than that of the aperture such that as the nut is tightened on a threaded rod, the deformable member is forced to flow against the threaded rod and an engaging surface (Figs. 5 and 6) which would provide both a sealing and a protection against loosening such as would be caused by vibration. As the nut body is further tightened or backed off the threaded rod the forces applied against the deformable member increase and reduce respectively.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hollinger as applied to claims 1 and 7 above, and further in view of Heighberger (US

Art Unit: 3679

3,938,571). Heighberger is relied upon for the material of the deformable member. At the time the invention was made, it would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to make the deformable member of Hollinger out of polytetrafluorethylene as disclosed in Heighberger for its excellent quality of elastic memory as described therein.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
